Ford, Reagan face first critical test tonight

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) -With party rules and platform planks as the issues, Gerald R. Ford and Ronald Reagan are heading into the first critical test of their delegate strength at the 1976 Republican National Convention.

Reagan and his strategists chose the issues on which the key votes would be taken tonight, but as the time for balloting drew near Ford's delegate total in the contest for the presidential nomination moved to within three votes of the 1,-130 needed for victory.

The latest Associated Press survey, based on legal com-mitments and publicly stated preferences, gave Ford 1,127, Reagan 1,036, with 96 uncommitted.

For weeks the Ford camp has claimed the President had 1,135 votes, while Reagan's managers have said the former of 1,140 votes on the first ballot for the presidential nomination. But those claims were viewed largely as part of the intense political, psychological warfare the two men aimed at each other and at the uncommitted delegates who hold the key to the aspirations of both men.

The roll call votes tonight, occurring just 24 hours before the presidential balloting, will be taken as a clear sign of which man will leave Kansas City as the Republican nominee for president

A decisive victory for either man could cripple the other's chance for the nomination.

The Reagan forces are geared for a floor fight tonight on their proposal to require that each presidential candidate name his proposed run-ning mate before the balloting on the presidential nomination.

Reagan backers call it the 'right to know' rule. The Ford camp describes it as Reagan's attempt to force the President to endure an uproar similar to that which Reagan encountered when he named Sen. Richard S. Schweiker as his choice for the vice presidential nomination.

Ford's backers called the Reagan proposal the "misery loves company" rule.

The other major fight planned by the Reagan camp involves the foreign policy plank in the Republican platform which will be presented to the convention for approval.

Entitled "Morality in Foreign Policy," the Reagan amendment to the platform would insert a statement implicitly critical of the policy of detente with the Soviet Union pursued by Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

The Reagan statement would put the Republican party on record as supporting many of the criticisms of Ford foreign policy that the former California governor used as campaign

Nonetheless, some Ford advisers were recommending that the President accept the amendment and avoid a divisive floor fight, according to sources close to the campaign.

But Sen. Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, Ford's convention floor manager, said a final decision on how to deal with the proposal probably wouldn't be made until Ford strategists could assess the vote on the rules, scheduled to come up before the platform committee re-

The proposed plank include the following statements: -"Ours will be a foreign policy which recognizes that in international negotiations cessions; that in pursuing detente we must not grant unilateral favors with only the hope of getting future favors in re-

-"Agreements that are negotiated, such as the one signed in Helsinki, must not take from those who do not have freedom the hope of one day gaining it."

-"Finally, we are committed to a foreign policy in which secret agreements, hidden from our people, will have no part." Ford signed and Reagan assailed the Helsinski agreement on future East-West relations in Another platform fight is likely to occur on the abortion issue. But that does not involve a test between Ford and Reagan supporters. Some platform committee members plan a floor fight to delete an endorsement of "the efforts of those who seek enactment of a constitutional amendment to restore protection of the right to life for unborn children.'

The convention, the 31st in the history of the Republican party and one of the most divided, opened at 10:30 a.m., CDT Monday. In the tradition of most opening sessions of political conventions, it was devoted to a succession of speeches to which few delegates appared to listen.

One message was clear: Fight for the candidate of your choice, but don't forget to unite once the battle is decided. And don't forget, the Democrats and Jimmy Carter are waiting around the corner.

Speaker after speaker labeled the Democrats as free spenders whose platform would cost $200 billion a year to implement - a claim Carter disputed during the day from his home in Georwishy-washy on the issues.

The opening day was split between morning and afternoon sessions. The oratorical highlight was the keynote speech by Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, regarded as one of the leading prospects for the vice presidential nomination on a ticket headed by Ford.

Baker opened his speech with a call for "straight talk and for common sense. For straight talk about the condition of our party, and for common sense about the needs of our nation." Baker was the senior Republican on the Senate Watergate committee and he dealt with the scandal and its effect on the Republican Party early in his speech.

Baker went on to accuse the Democrats of "running around rattling the dusty old skeletons of Watergate all over again."

What most of Baker's listeners didn't know was that the senator came under White House pressure to drop the early emphasis on Watergate.

"A lot of people were con-cerned about handling Watergate at the beginning of the speech fairly extensively," Baker said later. "But I thought we had to handle it and I did.... You can't wish it away ... because in 1976, for Republicans I think it's an inevitable issue and for the Democrats, I think it's irresist-

Monday night's schedule also offered speeches by Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona and Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller. Not too many years ago the appearance of those two men at a Republican convention would incite delegates and spectators to extended demonstrations of adoration or hostility.

"I believe I am right in saying that this move (to open the committee to all) would not have passed had it not been pushed by Reagan delegates," said Curtis. Speaking before the Missouri caucus this morning, Curtis said he was not in total agreement with Reagan's choice of Sen. Richard Schweiker as a running mate, but that he praised

Reagan for doing it out in the open three weeks before the convention. According to Curtis, if all candidates would do this, it would stop the dangling of 14 or so possible running mates he before the delegates - the purpose being to get delegates from key states. Wiley Mayne, a former congressman from Iowa and Ford delegate to the convention, spoke before the Missouri delegation against Rule 16-C. He said that a presidential candidate has a right to name whomever he wants as his running mate and that the convention does not need to know whom he will pick before he is nominated.

It often occurs to people that the friends who are the most generous in giving are unfortunately those with the poorest taste.

The federal government now officially acknowledges just how wasteful and inefficient the U.S. Postal Service has become. Bulletin FPMR B-63 issued by the General Services Administration urges federal agencies to use private carriers instead of the U.S. mails. The bulletin, entitled, "Reducing Mail Costs," notes that federal postage costs have soared 72 per cent, to $519, in the past three years. "Use commercial small- parcel carriers as a cheaper alternative to priority mail and U.S. Postal Service-insured parcels," says the bulletin.

As part of a drug- education program in Newark, Delaware, a policeman stopped in on a class of ninthgraders to alert them to the dangers of narcotics. He passed around three marijuana joints so the kids could see what they looked like and know what to avoid. At the end of the presentation, the three joints weren't returned. The policeman sternly warned that anyone caught outside the classroom with a marijuana cigarette would be charged with possession; he'd pass around his hat, close his eyes and if the missing joints were placed in it, he'd ask no further questions. The hat came back with seven marijuana cigarettes in it.

Satellite trackers of the North American Air Defense Command are marking 15 years of watching things go around in circles

NORAD's Space Defense Center began functioning in Colorado Springs July 1, 1961, nearly four years after the Soviets launched the first satellite. Since then it has tallied a steady increase in man-made hardware in space.

The center's log curently shows a total of more than 8,000 objects that have been launched. Of these, 3,910 are still in space, while the rest have fallen out of orbit and disintegrated in the atmosphere. Only 862 of the stillorbiting objects are payloads (instrument packages). The other 3,048 are classified as debris, including rocket motors, tether cables and other assorted pieces of junk.

Although orbiting space objects return to earth at the rate of about one a day, the gain in new satellites is greater than the loss, and NORAD analysts predict a continuing boom in space traffic. A satellite population forecast computed by NORAD indicates that in another 15 years, the in-space count will top 7,200 and that by the year 2000 there could be 10,000 objects of all shapes and sizes whirling about overhead.

At one time or another during the past eight decades, more than, 1,500 auto makers in virtually every state built motor vehicles. It was in Detroit, however, where interchange ability of parts and the moving assembly line took root.

It required 50 years until 1946, to reach the 75-millionth car mark, and only 30 more years to add the nex 200 million. In 1946, only about half of American families owned cars. Today, eight out of every 10 families own at least one car.

If Detroit cannot claim credit for the 275-millionth car, says Roe, "It can, and should, take pride in founding an industry that is a major contributor to the lifestyle and economic wellbeing of every American.'

Although orbiting space objects return to earth at the rate of about one a day, the gain in new satellites is greater than the loss, and NORAD analysts predict a continuing boom in space traffic. A satellite population forecast computed by NORAD indicates that in another 15 years, the in-space count will top 7,200 and that by the year 2000 there could be 10,000 objects of all shapes and sizes whirling about overhead.

Miniature foam rubber sponges, similar to those housewives have used for years to wipe up spills in the kitchen, may hold the answer to soaking up large ocean

A California company, Ocean Design Engineering, has developed a system using polyurethane foam chips to absorb oil floating on water, reports Modern Plastics magazine. The system reportedly can collect 50,000 gallons of oil an hour using millions of tiny foam chips distributed over just a 20-foot- wide spill area.

Next step is to borrow another idea from the kitchen a giant squeezer to retrieve all that valuable oil from the chips.

Today, there are more than 145 million telephones in the United States representing a phone, or phones, households and virtually every place of business - and the uses to which Bell's invention has been put since 1876 would fill a book as thick as the Manhattan directory.

Yet while we have come to accept the telephone as an indispensible tool in commerce and for day- to - day communication, few celebrations of the telephone's centennary have mentioned its role as a lifesaving or health- preserving "The simple little black, red, yellow, pink or white instrument that sits by the bedside saves more lives every day and night of the year than the oxygen tent, the pacemaker, the hyperbaric chamber or the dialysis machine all put together," says Pamela Loren, chairman of the board of Loren Communications International. The federal government debt increased almost 24 per cent in 1975, the greatest increase since World War II, reports the Commerce Department. The increase in 1974 was 3.4 per cent. America is no stranger to offbeat and sometimes weird religious cults, from end- of the-worlders to snake-handlers. Historically, however, they have been home- grown movements, offshoots of Judeo - Christian tradition.

some, who seem to be looking for something they cannot find Western religions or philosophies, for thousands of others it has become a dedicated way of life. In every large city, for example, one sees groups of robed and shaved-headed young men and women, and their children, thumping drums and shaking tambourines and monotonously chanting. Polite, inoffensive (except for the visual and aural pollution they cause), these are the followers of the Hindu diety Krishna, who when they are not on the streets live in communes rigidly governed by an asceticis and discipline rivaling that of a medieval monastery A less obvious manifestation of this new influence of Orientalism is the popularity of various schools of meditation which many people are dabbling in with hopes of finding inner calm or self-understanding or answers to the riddle of existence.

What is strange about the phenomenon is that one need only take a look at the history of the East to see what religion has done for people, and that at best has been to reconcile the great masses of them to abject misery and poverty.

For every guru who found inner peace sitting under a tarmarind tree, millions of others over the centuries eked out short lives of toil, disease, ignorance and superstitution. It has been said of India that it was a country without a sense of history, where nothing ever changed and where there was no desire for change.

What we are witnessing is allegedly a growing rejection of the Western concept of 'progress,' a disillusionment with an reaction against technology and the unceasing social and psychological dislocations it brings about.

There is no doubt much truth to that, and a leavening of our obsession with change for change's sake with a little Oriental tranquility may indeed be beneficial. In the meantime, however, the drum- thumpers and tambourine- shakers remain objects of curiosity rather tan the harbingers of a future way of life most Americans want anything to do XXX

CAR ASSEMBLY LINE DETROIT, TRADE

Some time in July, the U.S. automobile industry produced its 275 millionth passenger car. By unplanned coincidence, the 275th birthday of the city which symbolizes the automobile to the world, Detroit, was also celebrated in July. The ironyis that the milestone car may not even have been made in Detroit, notes Stanley Roe, manager of the statistics department of the Motor Vehicle

Manufacturers Association. There are currently some 102 automobile assembly lines scattered in 29 states, and no way of determining which one of them built the 275- million car. Less than eight per cent of the country's motor vehicles are now produced in Detroit.

At one timeor another during the past eight decades, more than, 1.500 auto makers in virtually every state built motor vehicles are now produced in Detroit.

At one time or another during the past eight decades, more than, 1,500 auto makers in virtually every state built motor vehicles. It was in Detroit, however, where interchange ability of parts and the moving assembly line took root.

It required 50 years until 1946, to reach the 75-millionth car mark, and only 30 more years to add the nex 200 million. In 1946, only about half of American families owned cars. Today, eight out of every 10 families own at least one car. If Detroit cannot claim credit for the 275-millionth car, says Roe, "It can, and should, take pride in founding an industry that is a major contributor to the lifestyle and economic wellbeing of every American.

So congratulations, auto incongratulations, Detroit.

XXX FOR THE FUTURE

"The credibility of the United States - our credibility around the world - rests upon our vast resources as much as our defenses. Some nations with other political philosophies have virtually the same tractors and the same combines that our farmers use but their farmers do not have the same incentives. Our farmer earns his income from a free market, not from a government check financed by the taxpayer. We must continue this vigorous market- oriented free enterprise in agriculture and commondities, not just for the benefits today, but more important for the future.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — It seems plastic bread wrappers are forever getting stuck on my chrome broiler while it is hot. I wonder how, if ever, I can remove this plastic without scratching the surface.

I suggest that a hamper be bought for each family member and let them take care of their own wash. This is a terrific help for Mom and a terrific experience for the children. I guarantee they will get fewer clothes dirty. Also, let each child vacuum his own room and make him feel responsible. Give yourself a little break as you have earned it.

Keep a lot of canned potatoes, eggs, hot dogs, ham-burger patties, milk, canned beans and soup handy for emergencies so you can pick up and go out with no worries about the children's dinner. Enjoy the summer. Fall will soon be here and back we go to the grind of packing lunches, cooking good hearty meals, driving kids to school and here and there. — VAL.

DEAR VAL — As to your question I have had good luck reheating the broiler which softens the stuck-on plastic. Unplug and while still hot rub it off. As plastic and appliance are both hot your hand must be protected, so crumple up a paper towel or napkin and rub plastic back and forth until it "balls," or an end loosens so most of it can be pulled away. The residue that remains can be removed by putting rubbing alcohol on the towel and rubbing again. When appliance is cool, remove the dull look by rubbing again with the alcohol. It will gleam like a mirror. — POLLY.

Associated Press Food Editor About 20 years ago I met Lib-About 20 years ago I met Libby Smith, a young woman from Marblehead, Mass., who gave cooking classes and had written a cookbook. A friend of hers gave a party for her in New York and I was invited. Our paths never crossed again, but I sometimes thought of her because she had cooked the main dish served at the party — a fabulously good fish chowder, the best I had ever tasted. That's something a food editor doesn't forget!

Recently a neighbor of mine told me that her sister-in-lw, who lived in Marblehead, had a reputation as a fine cook. When I asked her name, I discovered that Libby Smith was now Libby Alsberg and that she and her husband George publish a food-letter that includes recipes and notes on wine. It's called "The Everyday Gourmet" and it goes to subscribers every two weeks the year round except during July. The Alsbergs deonor "being devoted to eating joyolsay ously and economically and at the the same time preserving our the same time preserving our heritage of fine foods and their preparation for the table." Libby and George are both in the travel business, as they have been for many years. Lib-by is now semi-retired; George works full-time. Both of them work on the food-letter, but George's special contribution is the wine notes. Libby says, "George loves me and good food. What could be a more satisfying situation? What is more,

When I tried Libby's recipe for Zucchini Teacake (made with low-cholesterol peanut oil) from "The Everyday Gourmet," I found it just as wonderfully good in its way as her long-ago fish chowder. Here's my adaptation of the recipe.

On wax paper stir together the flour, baking powder, bak-ing soda, salt and cinnamon.

In a large mixing bowl beat together the sugar, peanut oil and vanilla until combined; thoroughly beat in the eggs one at a time. Stir in the flour mixture in several additions alternately with the zucchini. Stir in the walnuts and currants. Turn into the prepared pans — they will be about ½ full.

Bake in a preheated 350-de-gree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 45 minutes for small loaves, 55 to 60 minutes for large loaves. (Loaves will crack on top.) Loosen edges and turn out on wire racks; turn right side up; cool com-

Around this time of year, a lot of people complain that reruns are getting through to them. They say they feel the side effects of watching the same TV shows again. Again. Again.

I don't know what they're talking about. I accept reruns as a necessary part of television to give performers some time off, to give people a chance to see something they've missed, and of course to keep the cost down.

A friend of mine confessed that he watched "The Wizard of Oz" for the 18th time the other night and this time when the tornado sucked up Toto and Dorothy, he actually cheered.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — It seems plastic bread wrappers are forever getting stuck on my chrome broiler while it is hot. I wonder how, if ever, I can remove this plastic without scratching the surface.

I suggest that a hamper be bought for each family member and let them take care of their own wash. This is a terrific help for Mom and a terrific experience for the children. I guarantee they will get fewer clothes dirty. Also, let each child vacuum his own room and make him feel responsible. Give yourself a little break as you

Keep a lot of canned potatoes, eggs, hot dogs, hamburger patties, milk, canned beans and soup handy for emergencies so you can pick up and go out with no worries about the children's dinner. Enjoy the summer. Fall will soon be here and back we go to the grind of packing lunches, cooking good hearty meals, driving kids to school and here and there. - VAL.

DEAR VAL — As to your question I have had good luck reheating the broiler which softens the stuck-on plastic. Unplug and while still hot rub it off. As plastic and appliance are both hot your hand must be protected, so crumple up a paper towel or napkin and rub plastic back and forth until it "balls," or an end loosens so most of it can be pulled away. The residue that remains can be removed by putting rubbing alcohol on the towel and rubbing again. When appliance is cool, remove the dull look by rubbing again with the alcohol. It will gleam like a mirror. — POLLY.

Associated Press Food Editor

About 20 years ago I met Libby Smith, a young woman from Marblehead, Mass., who gave cooking classes and had written a cookbook. A friend of hers gave a party for her in New York and I was invited. Our paths never crossed again, but I sometimes thought of her because she had cooked the main dish served at the party - a fabulously good fish chowder, the best I had ever tasted. That's something a food editor doesn't forget!

Recently a neighbor of mine told me that her sister-in-lw, who lived in Marblehead, had a reputation as a fine cook. When I asked her name, I discovered that Libby Smith was now Lib-by Alsberg and that she and her husband George publish a food-letter that includes recipes and notes on wine. It's called "The Everyday Gourmet" and it goes to subscribers every two weeks the year round except during July. The Alsbergs deof scribe their publication as nor "being devoted to eating joyand her husband, Lindsay ously and economically and at the same time preserving our heritage of fine foods and their Libby and George are both in the travel business, as they have been for many years. Libby is now semi-retired; George works full-time. Both of them work on the food-letter, but George's special contribution is the wine notes. Libby says, "George loves me and good food. What could be a more satisfying situation? What is more, he cooks with the hand of an

When I tried Libby's recipe for Zucchini Teacake (made with low-cholesterol peanut oil) from "The Everyday Gourmet," I found it just as wonderfully good in its way as her long-ago fish chowder. Here's my adaptation of the recipe.

Reruns: once is enough

By ERMA BOMBECK

Around this time of year, a lot of people complain that reruns are getting through to them. They say they feel the side effects of watching the same TV shows again. Again. Again.

I don't know what they're talking about. I accept reruns as a necessary part of television to give performers some time off, to give people a chance to see something they've missed, and of course to keep the cost down.

I don't know what they're talking about. I accept reruns as

"We had this casserole two nights ago and once last week." the family complained. "But I always serve my tuna

"No, no. This is the one where the young girl patient is put in a home for the elderly and incites them to riot."

Ann Landers

Once a day chases wife away

Dear Ann Landers: You might not be able to print this but I am going to write it anyway. Please tell me if I am wrong.

I am 24, my husband is 29. This is my second marriage. His first. We have been married 15 months. If I don't agree to having sex every night he gets mad.

I've explained a hundred times that I work at a job eight hours a day, the same as he does. I also have the house to take care of, the cooking and laundry. Some nights I'm just too exhausted for romance.

I can't wash dishes without him coming up behind me and making some obscene gesture. If I lie down on the couch after supper he is right there. The man is after me all the time.

I love him, Ann, and I want this marriage to work, but I don't think it is fair of him to be so demanding. What is "enough" and what is "too much"? You tell me and I'll tell him. -- Hiding From "Hot Stuff"

Dear Hiding: Nothing I say will lower his thermostat, but I'm going to say something husband is paying you the ultimate compliment, he is inconsiderate, selfish, and probably oversexed.

I get the impression you receive no help from "Hot Stuff" with the household chores. Unfair! The next time he chases you around the house, hand him the vacuum sweeper and tell him to work off some of that excess energy by giving you some assistance. Dear Ann Landers: I agree wholeheartedly with your comments to the woman who surprised the hostess with a chocolate cake. I've been surprised like that and was not pleased. I respect the intentions of guests who bring cakes, but too often a random dessert collides with the hostess's carefully prepared menu. And now will you please say something to dinner guests who insist on bringing an armful (or a box) of beautiful, fresh, UNARRANGED flowers?

Here I am, welcoming guests, and someone thrusts flowers at me. How can I do an adequate job of flower arranging under those conditions? It seems ungracious not to display the posies, but it's worse to pop them carelessly into an inappropriate container -- a container should also be a gift to the hostess. Tell 'em, Annie. -- Milly In Michigan

Dear Milly: Right you are, BUT, when a hostess finds herself the recipient of an armful (or box) of unarranged flowers, the trick is to get the flowers off her hands and on suggest she ask another guest to do the flower arranging, and not be too fussy about the container. Dear Ann Landers: This is going to seem foolish, but I need some reassurance from someone who is smarter than I. Our nine-year-old Cindy has become "best friends" with a chum at school. Cindy has been invited to Jan's home for dinner and says it's like a "palace" and they eat "like Thanksgiving every night." Our home is very simple and our table meager. Jan loves to come here and does so often. I'm self-conscious about the difference, especially at mealtime. We have seven kids and sometimes there's barely enough to go 'round. Should I say something? -- A Mom

Dear Mom: Kids don't visit a friend's house because it's palatial or the food is good. There's nothing to say - so keep quiet.

Cardinal bullpen fails as San Diego explodes for eight runs in ninth ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis' Red Schoendienst insists what his club needs most is help in the bullpen.

And, in view of what happened to Schoendienst's Cardinals Monday night, few would be in a position to dispute the manager's claim.

The Cards, the National League's youngest entry, protected a 6-3 lead over the San Diego Padres with but three outs to go at Busch Stadium.

Then, with relief leader Al Hrabosky beginning on the mound, a procession of four second-line pitchers failed and permitted the Padres to waltz off with an 11-7 triumph.

Whether the ninth-inning turnabout was to San Diego's credit or to St. Louis' discredit was a matter for clubhouse

"We didn't play all that well, but we had the wherewithall to pull it out and get a few key hits," Padres Manager John McNamara suggested.

"We have a ball club that doesn't give up," McNamara added. "Willie Davis certainly had a big hit, but in that situation they were all big hits."

Hrabosky, making his 53rd appearance, had come on an inning earlier when Cards starter Lynn McGlothen weakened to permit two San Diego hits.

The hard-throwing left-hander yielded Mike Ivie's two-run single, then began the ninth by surrendering Doug Rader's pinch double and walking Enzo Her-

Bill Greif, 2-8, came to Hrabosky's relief only to be greeted by singles off the bats of Jerry Turner and Johnny Grubb that produced a Padres run.

Tito Fuentes popped out to stall the rally temporarily, but Dave Winfield walked to force in another run and Davis' key double off Mike Wallace accounted for a 7-6 Padres lead.

Winfield was cut down at the plate attempting to score on Davis' hit, so Wallace intentionally walked Ivie to get at Ted Kubiak.

Kubiak crossed up that strategy by singling home what turned out to be the winning run and Hernandez, following a walk to Bob Davis, tripled off Eddie Solomon to score the final three of eight

Connors, playing nearly flaw-less tennis and displaying uncommon seriousness that showed his intent to win, never trailed, coasting to an easy 6-2, 6-4 victory and a first prize of $25,000.

"I tried my best, but he was too good, too good," Fibak said, shaking his head after the nationally televised tennis lesson that cost him $12,500 - the difference between first and second prize.
"I did have some strategy, to

The standings in the Sikeston Fast-Pitch Softball League have loosened up---but not so much that you can tell it. The Eagles' 3-2 extra-inning win over Security National Bank gives them sole possession of first place. But, when Marks beat Bank of Sikeston 8-2, they stayed within a game and four teams still have a good shot at the title.

John Chessor went the route to pick up the win for the Eagles. Both clubs scored a run in the second and the Eagles went up 2-1 in the third. Security National tied it again in the fourth and it stayed that way until the bottom of the eighth. Then, Terry Comstock doubled and Jerry Taylor bunted him to third. A sacrifice squeeze bunt by Bert Ashcraft scored Comstock with the winner and gave the Eagles a 15-6 record. Second place Steward Steel is 14-7, a game behind and nine percentage points ahead of third place Marks Food Mart.

Marks made their record 15-8 by belting Bank of Sikeston 8-2. The Bank's record is 14-8. Bob Stinnett went three-for-four at the plate in addition to picking up the pitching win for Marks.

Bank of Sikeston went ahead with a two-run second. Don Smith had a triple during the rally, then belted a double later during a two-for-three night.

Marks tied the score 2-2 in the fourth and went ahead during a three-run sixth. Three more insurance runs were added in the top of the seventh.

Connors overpowers Fibak for clay title

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - "I think Jimmy Connors is the player who can produce the best (tennis) game in the world. He can lose, but if he's playing at his best, he is the best player in the world." -Wojtek Fibak.

"I'll agree to that." - Jimmy Connors

Fibak, the No. 1 player in Poland, was openly in awe of Conperformance Monday night in the championship match of the U.S. Clay Court tennis tournament.

Connors, playing nearly flawless tennis and displaying uncommon seriousness that showed his intent to win, never trailed, coasting to an easy 6-2, 6-4 victory and a first prize of $25,000. "I tried my best, but he was too good, too good," Fibak said, shaking his head after the nationally televised tennis lesson that cost him $12,500 - the difference between first and second prize. "I did have some strategy, to slow down the game," the 11thseeded Fibak said. "But any time I did that, he hit so hard I was out of position. Connors and Fibak are both 23 years old. Connors has been at the top of the tennis world; Fibak would like to get there.

For the second time in two weeks, Fibak reached the championship round of a major tournament, but he came up against Connors at his best and left the court still looking for his first winner's trophy.

"I had a lot of tough matches all week," said Fibak, who beat three seeded players in earlier rounds, including No. 2 Guillermo Vilas on Sunday. "But in those matches I could do what I wanted to do. Tonight, I had Connors, told that Fibak considered him capable of being the best player in the world, agreed quickly. But he added, "If (Ilie) Nastase's playing at his best, then he's the best player in the world."

Connors was then asked what would happen if both he and Nastase were at their best and met each other.

"Well," Connors hesitated for

What's the law? Case of the opportunist

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B. Leroy was an opportunist in the worst sense of the word. Consequently, when he hap-pened upon a man lying in the street, who had just died of a heart attack, he immediately began to rifle the dead man's

When you take money out of someone else's pocket," responded the district attorney, "that's robbery. That's also not very nice."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict Leroy of robbery?

This is how the judge ruled:

Schools to lose textbook funds

JEFFERSON CITY-Missouri counties and the city of St. Louis will lose $845,323 in state aid to provide free textbooks this year due to a change in the way state appropriations were drafted by the General Assembly.

J. Neil Nielsen, Missouri's commissioner of administration, announced that the appropriations method adopted by the State Legislature this year, over the objections of Gov. Christopher S. Bond, will allow the state to distribute only $17.5 million of receipts from the county foreign insurance tax, even though state law provides for a distribution of $18,345,323.

"This action, which will deprive every school district of funds needed for textbooks, is not only regrettable, but it is totally unnecessary." Nielsen totally unnecessary," Nielsen said. The state law provides for a distribution to counties of 50 per cent of all proceeds from the foreign insurance tax, he ex-

The state collected $36,690,645 last year, which would have allowed $18.34 million to be sent to counties this fall. But, the legislature placed a ceiling of $17.5 million on the distribution in appropriations bills, thus preventing full payment ot countires.

"When we submitted our hudget in January," Nielsen said, "we estimated that $17.5 million would allow a full distribution. Since appropriations this year had to be passed in April, while most receipts for this tax are not received until late April and May, it was not possible to estimate receipts precisely, nor tto advise the legislature that $17.5 million was inadequate. "For those reasons, and because it makes no sense to place an arbitrary ceiling on a program such as this, we requested approval of an open appropriation which would allow full payment to counties of all available funds, even if higher than our early estimate, as has been done in previous years. This request was denied by the General Assembly.

'The House speaker claimed that placing ceilings on this type of program would give the Legislature a better ac-countability of funds expended by state agencies. While I fail to see how we are more ac-countable by withholding funds that rightfully belong to counties, I do think it is clear who is accountable for this deplorabel situation.

While I regret the impact this will have on teaching programs, I sincerely hope that egislators, and particularly the legislative leadership, will themselves be taught by this experience that accountability is not enhanced by tying the hands of the executive branch with unnecessary and arbitrary controls," Nielsen said.

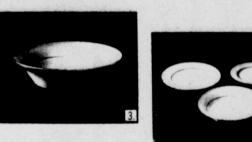

It was the patriots, and not the British, who were the first to use indians in the Revolutionary War. The Massachusetts Provincial Congress, in March, 1775, allowed Stockbridge indians to form a company of minutemen, and Congress, in May, 1775 instructed indian commissioners to try to keep the savages neutral, or else enlist them. Departments were created to administer to indian affairs, and The World Almanac notes that an appropriation of $17,000 was voted for rum and gifts!

Litton booster, workers endorse Spainhower

KANSAS CITY (AP) - State Treasurer James I. Spainhower brought to western Missouri today his emergency campaign for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate.

He had the blessing of Norman Released:

Mrs. Ronnie Gray and son Scott O. Sanders, Kansas City lawyer who headed the campaign organization which boosted Rep. Jerry Litton to an amazing victory in the primary on Aug. 3. Litton and his family were killed in a plane crash even at the returns were being tabulated on election night. The 60 members of the Democratic State Committee are to meet in Jefferson City on Saturday to pick a replacement on the ticket for the general election in November.

Sanders said Monday that Spainhower is the favorite of Litton's campaign workers.

Warren E. Hearnes, the former governor who ran a distant second to Litton in the primary, has said 37 of the members of the state committee-six more than needed-will vote to give the nomination to Hearnes.

"The overwhelming majority of Jerry's supporters indicated their clear choice for his successor is State Treasurer James I. Spainhower," Sanders said in a letter sent Monday to the members of the state com-

"While we obviously cannot speak for every single person who supported Jerry, it is clear from the nearly 700 persons that we have heard from that they consider Jim Spainhower their choice to succeed him."

Spainhower scheduled a new confernce at Kansas City this morning and another at St. Joseph in the afternoon. In connection with both appearances, he was to meet with members of the state committee.
